This would give them plenty of time in which to prepare their candidates and to run them into form on the track. is nothing but a handicap, having penalties and allowances. There has been no antepost betting on the Derby this year. The blockmakers have found it to be a losing investing on the Derby this year. The blockmakers have found it to be a losing investing to be invented as the result in the control of the vacuum in the United States Treasury resulting through Reed's Billion Dollar Congress plundering.

Why don't some of your shrewd Eastern bookmakers of acknowledged integrity establish a Paris mutual pool during the Winter months, whereby turf speculators would be enabled to put a fiyer on their choices for any of the three big future events—the Brooklyn Handicap, Buburban and Kentacky Derby? Such a pool arrangement would be liberally patronized by turf followers in this section, and, in all probability, by those in the East and West as well. This is something that should be agritated.

Prigrim are all half-brothers to Rogers.
There is pedigree enough and plenty of speed in this fellow, and he will certainly go the Derby route well enough to be in it at the finish. He will likely receive the backing of the majority of Louisville bettors.
Lexington will send kingman and Balsowan. The latter is hardly thought to be relass enough on his dam's side to develop into a prominent Derby candidate. Kingman is being trained by Dudley Allen, one of the best of the old-time colored trainers. He captured the Derby with Varrant several years age and is known to be just the kind of a trainer to fit a coli for a mile and a half in May. Kingman will go to the post at Churchill Downs with the Lexington money on him.

Georgetown will probably start. He is a good colt and will have a fighting charice, it was rumored a short time ago that his legs were in bad shape, but it transpires that the report was not founded on fact. He is being trained by John McGinty, who has already returned two Derby winners in Leonatus and Montrose. Allan flane will also represent Latonia, but turf critics here are not considering his chances as worthy of notice, saying that he has not the size to begin with and also that he has not pedispression. He cold chills must run down the Executive spine.

Palestine has also been favorably noticed in connection with the Derby. He is being fitted as Wainut Hills, near Lexington. Palestine showed some high-class work last Fall, but he is said to be a quitter, and if this be true he will have no chance in the Darby.
